

130 musicians joining forces for Primavera

The musicians of the Symphony Orchestras of Bosch and SAP joined forces for a great evening in the packed 'Liederhalle' venue in Stuttgart on July 14, in order to support the good cause: Primavera - Help for Children in Need

Christoph Kübel, a member of the Robert Bosch Board and Chairman of Primavera, together with Peter Delhey CI/EC briefly informed the audience about the goals and activities of Primavera. The concert was sponsored and organized by the Bosch internal IT central department together with SAP - as a symbol of trust and close cooperation between the two companies over the past 33 years.

The orchestra, with its 130 members and two conductors Johanna Weitkamp (SAP) and Ulrich Walddörfer (Bosch) impressed with great skills. The varied program was entertaining and diverse in the best sense, reaching from the overture to Fra Diavolo by Daniel Auber and works of Antonin Dvorak's to the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Sergei Rachmaninoff. In particular Christian Döring as a soloist on the piano knew how to inspire the audience!

The grand finale was an absolutely unique presentation: selected Bosch Power Tools became musical "soloists" and impressed in total harmony with the orchestra through sounds and exceptional optical sparks. In the end, the audience thanked the participants of the evening with frenetic applause and standing ovations.

Also when it comes to donations, the guests and friends of Primavera were generous and provided a top score of 20,625.64 EUR that night.

A big THANK YOU to all donors!
